The story of why we celebrate Thanksgiving in America is an interesting one. Many hundreds of years ago, pilgrims from England came to the US so that they could practice their own religion. These people had a hard time in their new home. Many of them died because they didn't have enough food. They had arrived in America in the fall and didn't have the time or the know-how to plant food in this foreign country. But, help was on the way. The native people or "Indians" living in the area felt sorry for the pilgrims. They showed them how to plant food that could grow in the fall and also how to find food in this new land. As the story goes, the pilgrims and Indians had a party for three days to celebrate the Indians' helping of the pilgrims. They ate turkey, corn, pumpkins, and many other kinds of food that the pilgrims didn't know about. Over time, the celebration became known as "Thanksgiving."
