Chinese celebrate Moon Festival each year on the 15th day of the 8th lunar month. This year, that day is September 28. On Moon Festival, families gather together to eat a feast. Then they go outside and look at the big, beautiful full moon. To celebrate, they also give moon cakes to their family and friends. Where did the idea of moon cakes come from? Many years ago, people didn’t like the government of the Yuan Dynasty. They wanted a new government. One year, when they knew Moon Festival was coming, they ordered people to bake small round cakes. Inside these cakes, they hid the plans to get rid of the Yuan government. On the night of Moon Festival, they attacked the government. Their plan was successful. The Yuan dynasty ended, and the Ming dynasty began. Today moon cakes are eaten in memory of this story.
